Reservation maths

After a spat of suicides by politicians from Bihar and West Bengal, one can now turn the onion peas of Malihabati into an onion. Moderate steps. At large, the prices of vegetables have been dropping. This is seen as a growing debt from which farmers are trying to escape. More and more, the farmers are finding ways to sell their crops at a fair price. Although the prices of vegetables are still high, there is a possibility of a decline in the near future.

Conformers, speed matters more than politics

When launched, India’s first superfast train service, the Deccan Queen, ran from Mumbai to Hyderabad in 13.5 hours. But the new Mumbai-Pune expressway, which opened in 1999, has cut the time to 11 hours.

Double edge

There is a sharp increase in the number of applications to the UPSC. The number of applications received in all of 2005, the year the exam was conducted, was 4,56,000. In 2006, the number had soared to 10,58,000, an increase of 133 per cent. Interestingly, in all cases, the number of applications increased roughly proportionally to their share of the population. For example, the Muslims, though they constitute only 13 per cent of the population of the Muslim, though they constitute only 13 per cent of the population, the share of Muslims in the applications to the UPSC was 16 per cent. The reason for this increase in applications to the UPSC will be that many Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them. So, the Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them.

The UPSC examinations are open to all Indians. The number of applications received in all of 2005, the year the exam was conducted, was 4,56,000. In 2006, the number had soared to 10,58,000, an increase of 133 per cent. Interestingly, in all cases, the number of applications increased roughly proportionally to their share of the population. For example, the Muslims, though they constitute only 13 per cent of the population, the share of Muslims in the applications to the UPSC was 16 per cent. The reason for this increase in applications to the UPSC will be that many Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them. So, the Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them.

The UPSC examinations are open to all Indians. The number of applications received in all of 2005, the year the exam was conducted, was 4,56,000. In 2006, the number had soared to 10,58,000, an increase of 133 per cent. Interestingly, in all cases, the number of applications increased roughly proportionally to their share of the population. For example, the Muslims, though they constitute only 13 per cent of the population, the share of Muslims in the applications to the UPSC was 16 per cent. The reason for this increase in applications to the UPSC will be that many Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them. So, the Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them.

The UPSC examinations are open to all Indians. The number of applications received in all of 2005, the year the exam was conducted, was 4,56,000. In 2006, the number had soared to 10,58,000, an increase of 133 per cent. Interestingly, in all cases, the number of applications increased roughly proportionally to their share of the population. For example, the Muslims, though they constitute only 13 per cent of the population, the share of Muslims in the applications to the UPSC was 16 per cent. The reason for this increase in applications to the UPSC will be that many Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them. So, the Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them.

The UPSC examinations are open to all Indians. The number of applications received in all of 2005, the year the exam was conducted, was 4,56,000. In 2006, the number had soared to 10,58,000, an increase of 133 per cent. Interestingly, in all cases, the number of applications increased roughly proportionally to their share of the population. For example, the Muslims, though they constitute only 13 per cent of the population, the share of Muslims in the applications to the UPSC was 16 per cent. The reason for this increase in applications to the UPSC will be that many Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them. So, the Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them.

The UPSC examinations are open to all Indians. The number of applications received in all of 2005, the year the exam was conducted, was 4,56,000. In 2006, the number had soared to 10,58,000, an increase of 133 per cent. Interestingly, in all cases, the number of applications increased roughly proportionally to their share of the population. For example, the Muslims, though they constitute only 13 per cent of the population, the share of Muslims in the applications to the UPSC was 16 per cent. The reason for this increase in applications to the UPSC will be that many Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them. So, the Muslims do not have the support of all parties being for them.